The school is for children between the ages of two and four years of age from families on relief, WPA workers and other needy families of the community.

The Government provides for the teachers, equipment and the food, cod liver oil and Grade A milk served the children while in school.

The following is the schedule of the activities and routines of a nursery school child:

8.45 a. m. to 9.00 a. m.—Arrival of children. Nurses' inspection, and lavatory.

9.00 to 9.15—Cod liver oil, orange juice.

9.15 to 11.00—Work and play outdoors. Music and story-telling.

11.00 to 11.15—Preparation for lunch and rest period.

11.15 to 11.30—Rest period, each child on its own cot.

Some of the aims and valuable features of the nursery school are reported as being:

Improving health by diet, and daily inspection by a registered nurse.

Good play facilities, sand boxes, outdoor and indoor play equipment, where the child learns control of large and small muscles.

Build-up good habits and routines, which are not easily built-up in the average home.

Assists in preventing and eliminating behavior problems such as child fears, food refusals, temper tantrums, bullying, etc.

Help socialize child and provide him with playmates of his own age.

Gives child opportunity of working with paints, clay, music and story-telling. These activities serve as an outlet for self-expression.

Teaches parents as well as children, as parents can observe at the Nursery School, secure bulletins and books on child care, thereby helping parents to do better by the child when he is at home.

MORRISVILLE COUNCIL TO BACK FLOOD RELIEF DRIVE

Endorses Campaign to Raise
$7,000 by Red Cross
Citizens' Committee

WANT WALL AT RIVER

MORRISVILLE, Apr. 23—Common Council at a special meeting Tuesday night voted to endorse the drive to raise $7,000 by the Red Cross Citizens' Committee with which to rehabilitate families who suffered from the recent floods. It is estimated it will require at least $6,000 or more to repair the damage to properties and if new lots are required it may take another $500 or $1,000.

Charles Crist, of the Southeastern Chapter of the Red Cross, Mrs. J. E. Erwin, president, and Mrs. Uno Malstrom, chairman of the disaster and relief committee of the local branch, discussed the situation with Council and Mayor Thomas B. Stockham.

Council also voted to petition the War Department to build a wall along the riverfront to prevent recurrence of conditions which occurred here this year.

A new contract for power at the water works by which the borough is expected to save $1,300 a year, was passed. Bids for a street scraper which will weigh not less than 13,000 pounds and cost not more than $2,000, will be advertised for immediately. Councilman Frank Hibbs, chairman of the street committee, reported the new machine is needed at once.

Hibbs also announced it is the intention of his committee to have a tar and stone top surface placed on the following streets this Summer: North Lafayette Avenue from Trenton to Pennsylvania Avenue, West Franklin from Pennsylvania to Harper, Stockham from Franklin to Hendrickson, and Hendrickson from Stockham to Pennsylvania Avenue, Woodland Avenue, West Cleveland and Robertson Avenue, Mercer Street and Clymer from Mercer to Prospect.

Mae West Magnificent In Gold-Field Comedy

Toss out all your preconceived notions of Mae West; all you folks who have only visualized her as a languorous creature moving softly around in shimmering silks and satins are in for the surprise of your lives when you see her in "Klondike Annie," which opens tonight at the Grand Theatre for two days.

Mae plays the part of the Frisco Doll, rushing off to the Klondike on big, burly Capt. Bull Brackett's (Victor McLaglen) boat to try to escape the Frisco police, who are anxiously searching for her. After a succession of alternately thrilling and hilarious experiences, during which she has assumed the name of "Sister Annie," a famous evangelist, she finds herself in love with the Federal agent who has been sent out to bring her back to San Francisco to stand trial.

At this point she finds that the revival meetings which she has been holding, in her role as "Sister Annie," have had their effect on her character. She'd give anything in the world to be able to marry Phillip Reed, who loves her, but she realizes that she would bring him more unhappiness than joy. So she accepts the offer of Bull Brackett, who has been urging marriage on her ever since she stepped on his boat.

WEATHER BUREAU, FLOODS

While it is not possible that the Weather Bureau may have a definite physical relation to floods and flood control, yet various eminent engineers who are giving their attention to the problem of preventing disasters consequent on the creation of flood waters are paying tribute to a very important part the Weather Bureau does play in the collection and tabulation of preliminary data.

So valuable is this information considered from the viewpoint of engineering study that Robert Follansbee, district engineer of the Geological Survey at Denver, urges an expansion of these activities. As an instance of the need of such expansion, he points to the Republican River flood caused by a rainfall of flood proportions in a plains region of comparatively small area but in which there is a lack of observation stations. The inference, of course, is that the study of rainfalls in that area would develop data indicating the extent of the engineering problem of control.

The subject of cloudburst floods is a live one in Colorado and Wyoming. Mr. Follansbee continues, "and floods of that character have been investigated by the writer and the areas affected defined with a fair degree of accuracy. Much more work, however, remains to be done in order that the maximum unit runoff to be expected from floods of that character can be determined with sufficient accuracy to be of real value to the civil engineering profession."

The Follansbee assertion just quoted may be extended to cover a large part of the country, many sections of which have been scourged by uncontrolled rushes of devastating columns of water during the last year. In the older settled sections, of course, there should be now available plenty of information upon which to base control work. In sparsely settled sections, there is evidently opportunity for Weather Bureau work along the line suggested.

As for the rest of it, we must turn to Congress to provide the funds for control.

ONWARD

History is thought to repeat itself and life is said by the profound to move in cycles, but invention rushes onward never in return to yesterday's antiquated methods.

Every day production records in many industries are beaten through unproved methods and the inventive genius of engineers. The work of invention is being daily diminished by the never ceasing efforts of the inventor and the trained mechanic.

On the farm a twelve-months job for human hands has been reduced to a little as 60 days toil for machinery that never tires but the next generation will wonder how the "antiquated machinery" available.

The press which prints your daily newspaper is capable of printing and adding more papers each minute than the press of old could produce in a 12-hour working day. Inventive progress gives you your news today in less than an hour after it happens.

A Philadelphia school principal declares good looks should be a qualification of school teachers, to bring in the pupils. One wonders if he has been scaring them away.

"THERE'S MURDER IN THE AIR"

by ROY CHANSLOR

CHAPTER XX

Doris drew in her breath in a half-rasping sob.

"I didn't do it!" she cried. "I didn't do it!"

Carlotta placed an arm about her shoulder.

"Don't be silly, darling," she said. "Nobody thinks you—"

Doris wrenched free.

"Don't—don't touch me!" she said intensely.

Gordon went to her, took both her hands.

"Now, now," he said. "Don't let your nerves get the best of you, darling. Carlotta was only trying—"

Carlotta was smiling at her.

"It's all right, Paul," she said. "The child's upset—and no wonder. I understand."

She put out her hand again, but Doris shrank back into the arm of Gordon.

"What's the matter with you, Doris?" said Gordon sharply.

Carlotta made a pleading gesture toward him.

More gently he said: "What is it, darling?"

Doris drew in her breath.

"Nothing," she said in a low voice.

"Pull yourself together, child," said her foster-father.

Tyler, glancing at Ruth, saw that she had turned her face toward the sound of Carlotta's, Doris' and Gordon's voices. There was a curious expression on her face. Gordon put an arm about Doris' shoulders.

"Come, Doris," he said. "Don't be childish."

Doris nodded, and managed a weak little smile. Carlotta put out her hand again, and Doris allowed her to take her arm. Tyler saw that she was fighting for control of her nerves. He broke in, briskly: "Well, it looks as if our man got away again. He must have thrown the gun under Doris' bed, and somehow or other have slipped out by way of the balcony in the excitement. The only thing to do is keep careful watch—and search the grounds. Meanwhile, I move us adjourn till morning."

"But this—this man," Carlotta said. "Suppose he's still inside the house?"

"Don't worry, darling," said Gordon. "He can't get in again. I've posted a man in the hall downstairs, and another on the balcony. That will take care of the rooms on that floor. Now let's see—Doris, suppose you take Dave's room for the night. We can't move Benson."

Doris nodded.

"Of course," she said.

"I can bunk on the couch in your sitting-room, Dad," said David promptly.

"Fine," said Gordon. "Nelson, see that a man's put in this hallway. That'll take care of Dave and Johnson—and myself."

"Right," said Nelson.

"He went out quickly, Harrigan starting to follow."

"Wait, Harrigan," said Gordon. "Put a man in the cottage too."

"Kayo," said Harrigan.

"He left to carry out his orders. Dr. Grace came upstairs. To anxious questions he replied:—"

"The boy'll be all right. He's young and strong, and the wound is trivial. Ought to be up and around tomorrow."

Ruth turned an eager, hopeful face toward him. The physician patted her arm reassuringly. She sank back in her chair, relaxed and happy.

Dr. Grace turned to Gordon, his voice troubled.

"But I don't know about Helene," he said.

Gordon clutched at Dr. Grace's shoulder.

"There's—there's nothing serious the matter," he asked hoarsely.

"She's had a terrific shock," said the physician. "I'm hoping a night's sleep will make her all right. But I can't be sure."

He regarded Gordon for a moment. The man was tragically worried. Carlotta slipped her hand into his.

"I think you'd better go to bed, Paul," said Dr. Grace. "I've had Johnson get one of the maids to stay with Helene for the night."

"But she shouldn't be left. . . . I'm going to stay with her to-night," declared Carlotta suddenly.

"She has a maid with her," objected Doris.

"She needs some one closer to her—some one who loves her," said Carlotta.

"Then I'll stay with her," announced Doris.

Carlotta's eyes flashed, and she turned angrily on the girl. The two stared at each other. Carlotta flushed angrily.

"See here, Doris, enough's enough!" she said.

"I've as much right to stay with her as you," replied Doris.

Gordon broke the tension.

"Come, come!" he said. "Both of you'd best go to bed. We'll take care of Helene."

Doris shook her head in rebellion. Gordon took her arm, smiled at her indigently, gave her arm an affectionate squeeze.

"All right, Dad," she said meekly. She kissed him, murmured good-nights, and was gone.

Carlotta had recovered her composure. She smiled after her.

"Poor child, she is upset, of course," she said. "But I still think some one should stay with Helene."

"You may stay with her, of course," said her husband. "I don't know what's the matter with Doris. This—this petty jealousy isn't like her."

"I've already forgotten about it," said Carlotta. "She'll be all right in the morning."

She raised her face, and Gordon kissed her.

"Good night, Paul," she said. "Try to get some sleep."

She bade the others good night also and left the room. Gordon turned to Dr. Grace.

"Can you stay the rest of the night?" he asked. "We can put you up in one of the guest-rooms. There's one right across the hall."

"Certainly," said Dr. Grace. "I'll want to have a look at both of them in the morning."

He looked at Gordon reproachfully.

"Paul," he said, "was there anything at all peculiar about Helene this evening?"

"Peculiar?" he said. He shook his head, slowly. "Not that I noticed. Let me think—she did say right after dinner there was something she wanted to talk with me about."

"You talked to her?" Tyler asked interested.

"Why, no, I didn't," said Gordon. "Something came up. I don't remember what. . . . Oh, yes, Doris—"

He stopped. Tyler looked at him curiously.

"Doris had—something to tell me," he went on. "When I came back, Helene had gone to bed."

"Did anyone hear Helene ask to speak with you?" asked Tyler.

"Why—yes," said Gordon. "I believe Doris was there—and perhaps Carlotta."

"I heard her too," said David. "It was just before I went up to my room."

"That's so," said Gordon. "But—"

"It's nothing," Tyler smiled. "Now, I think we'd better say good night."

Harrigan appeared as Tyler and Ruth were coming out of Gordon's apartment.

"I've got a man in the cottage," he said. "I'll just walk along with you now."

He escorted them to the cottage, where they found a man on guard in the living-room, prepared for an all-night vigil. Harrigan cautioned him to investigate the slightest sound outside the cottage and then took his departure.

Tyler picked up Ruth's violin from the table and went with her up to her room. He turned on the light and put the violin on the bed. He saw her face turned toward him, questioning.

"Who do you think, Ruth?" he half-whispered.

She didn't answer for a moment. Then she raised her face, filled now with tender concern.

"Father," she said, "the moment after that shot was fired, I—I knew exactly what was in Nat's mind. It was terribly sharp—and clear."

"What was it, child?" Tyler asked gently.

"First—pain," said Ruth. "Physical pain, the reaction of his mind to that bullet. And then—a astonishment—and pain; but a different kind of pain—a pain that struck at his heart. And—and finally, a name."

She raised her face. "Doris' name," she whispered.

"Then she gave a little half-sob."

"Oh, Father, I can believe it!"

Tyler gripped both her shoulders and stood off, looking into her face.

"Kath!" he cried. "You are sure?"

She shook her head, miserably.

"No," she said. "Because at the moment that name was in Nat's mind, I had no communication with—with the mind of the—one who fired. . . . I don't know it was Doris—but who else could it be?"

"See here, Doris, enough's enough!" she said.

International Ball Was A Success

Rarely has the Langhorne Country Club looked so beautiful as on the occasion of the International Ball held Friday for the benefit of the educational department of the National Council for Prevention of War.

The ballroom was decorated with red, white and blue bunting, gay balloons later used in the balloon dance, and lots of evergreens. In the rooms where more than a hundred people circled around blazing log fires to play cards were draped flags of many lands. Spring flowers and blooms were in abundance and were artistically arranged in the lovely vases which were later given as prizes to the card players. The grill room with its large open fire place blazing forth a cheery welcome to those who came to partake of the delicious refreshments was the center of happy chatter and good social fellowship during the intermissions.

A unique feature of the ball was the number of instances where three generations of families were present. Grandparents playing cards and parents and their children dancing.

The music rendered by the orchestra was outstandingly fine and contributed greatly to the success of the ball. H. Prescott Herr acted as master of ceremonies.

A years' membership in the Langhorne Golf Club, the gift of the Country Club, was the prize for the Lucky Number Dance and was won by Miss Betty Murfit of Newtown.

Mrs. Henry Parry and her committee are to be congratulated on the artistic decorations, as are Mrs. William Parry and the committee who managed the card playing so efficiently.

In recent years it is not uncommon to find a great many saleable articles wrapped in cellophane. Cigarettes, lamp shades, candies, tobacco, shirts and many other articles of clothing are only a few of the many pieces of merchandise that come protected by this "find" of science.

And there we have the reason for its widespread use. PROTECTION. It keeps new articles of clothing clean, keeps tobacco fresh (some cigarettes even have two wrappers of cellophane to insure double freshness) and its continued appearance on the market has proved its usefulness.

We hardly expect you to wrap yourself in cellophane, of course, but we do know you can get the best protection possible by insuring YOUR life NOW! A company with an enviable 36 year record is ADDED PROTECTION for you.

THEODORE R. GARDNER FOR CONGRESS

Two years ago, when the New Deal was at the height of its influence, Theodore R. Gardner of Lehigh County, was the unanimous choice of the outstanding Republicans of that County for the Republican nomination for Congress.

The fact he was a young man was regarded as one of his greatest assets, and the argument in this respect was, that our problems being what they are, coupled with the likelihood that several years will elapse before the Republicans can come into the control of the Senate, Mr. Gardner possessed a life expectancy which would enable him, by successive re-elections, to gain the knowledge, the experience and the prestige of continued service which would make him an invaluable asset to his party and his constituency alike.

Mr. Gardner campaigned in Bucks County, and these arguments, combined with his character and evident ability, so impressed the Republicans of Bucks County, that in the November Election of 1934 they gave him a substantial majority.

Mr. Gardner, a lawyer and United States Commissioner, born in Allentown, a graduate from Muhlenberg College and the University of Pennsylvania Law School, who served a two-year enlistment in the United States Navy, at the expiration of which he was honorably discharged, possesses the same qualifications today as he did two years ago, but strangely enough, he is being opposed for the Republican nomination at the approaching Primary by one who was foremost among those who prevailed upon him to make the canvass, two years ago and under far less promising circumstances.

Shall the man who was willing to carry the standard in 1934, be turned down now because others desire to step in when they see the assurance of Republican victory in this contest?

We ask your support of acknowledged ability, straightforward integrity and fair play, by marking your ballot for Theodore R. Gardner for Congress, at the Primary Election, Tuesday, April 28th.

BUILD NEEDED SIDEWALKS AND OTHER PERMANENT IMPROVEMENTS

WORK relief projects must be found. The best ones are those which result in permanent community benefits.

Many blocks of new sidewalks are urgently needed—will have to be built soon anyway to extend present walks or replace old, wornout, dangerous walks.

Why not build these needed walks with relief labor? Hundreds of other cities have found this type of project ideal.

Curb and gutter construction, drainage structures, park improvements, swimming pools, salvaging old streets—these are only a few among hundreds of beneficial concrete improvements that create maximum work.

Prove Savings!

BIG CAR OWNERS SAVE EVEN MORE!

RESEARCH in this state reveals that literally thousands of motorists can save $24.48 or more this year on gasoline! The chances are better than ten to one that you're among them!

10,391 Ford, Chevrolet and Plymouth owners told us that they average 16.2 miles per gallon from other gasolines they've been buying. Yet certified road tests prove that Richfield Hi-Octane Gasoline averages better than 21.9 miles per gallon!

Prove it Yourself!

Look at the chart at the left. The figures tell the story. $24.48 a year is what Richfield can save for the average small car owner. And the bigger your car—the more gasoline you use—the more you save! Prove it with a "show-down" test in your car. Fill your tank with new 1936 Richfield Hi-Octane—the thrifty, regular-priced fuel for modern motors. Check the mileage, compare it with the mileage you've been getting. And convince yourself that Richfield can save you money day in and day out. Make your test today!

5 BIG REASONS FOR THE BIG SAVINGS

Here are the fuel-saving features that make Richfield Hi-Octane the choice of departments, taxicab and trucking companies, and other big gasoline users:

1. Richfield Hi-Octane contains more potential power per gallon.
2. It was developed especially for modern high-compression motors.
3. Richfield "flashes" faster—saves on every "cold" start.
4. No gasoline at its price has a higher octane (anti-knock) rating.
5. Richfield exceeds the U. S. Government specifications for "emergency" fuel!

SUNDAY DINNER

Suggestions

By ANN PAGE

AFTER generally higher prices for most foods last week there have been some reductions in most of the food groups including butter, meats and fish particularly.

Roasting chickens, 188¢ ducklings and squabs are lower but few continue high as they are doing a job of laying eggs both for now and next winter. Eggs continue to be an excellent value.

Lettuce, both the Boston and Iceberg types, are plentiful and inexpensive. Radishes and cauliflowers are also available. Locally grown rhubarb is beginning to come to market and makes good sauce as well as good pies and puddings.

Here are three menus planned for different budget levels.

Low Cost Dinner

Boiled End of Ham, Mashed Potatoes, New Cabbage, Baked Beans, Rice Pudding, Tea or Coffee, Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Veal Cutlet, New Potatoes, Green Peas in Cream, Dressing, Strawberry Shortcake, Tea or Coffee

Very Special Dinner

Pineapple and Mint Cup, Fried Chicken, Parsley Potatoes, Green Beans, Lettuce with Scallions and Radishes, Rolls and Butter, Strawberry Ice Cream, Wafers, Coffee

JOE SANKEY GETS DECISION OVER JOSEPH LOMBARDO AFTER FURIOUS WIND-UP OF CROYDON ARENA CARD

CROYDON, April 23.—In the wildest and most furious windup seen here, Joe Sankey, Middle Atlantic States 155-pound champion, got the decision, last night over Joseph Lombardo of the Daggart Club at the weekly amateur boxing show run under the Athletic Union auspices. The champ, a fast, two-fisted fighter who swings constantly and never lets the other fellow get set, met a tartar in the elongated Lombardo who punched with the Sankey boy at all times.

The crowd got a good thrill out of this bout. They expected to see a champion so swelled-up with his own importance that he would only go through the motions, but what a surprise they got. Mr. Sankey is the most serious-minded title holder to come to this town and he gave a great exhibition of rapid-fire punching. Lombardo got a great hand for his willingness to swing and punch with Sankey and for his exhibition of gameness.

In the semi-windup John Cubbins, of Germantown, defeated Bob Hinchcliffe of the Kensington Club in a hard fought battle. Cubbins, who showed so well here last week, was unable to open up in his usual style, because of the southpaw method Hinchcliffe employs.

John Walze, another Germantown entry, gave Larry Palmer, a light-heavyweight from the Nativty C. C., a trimming in three hard slashing rounds of bitter fighting.

Charles Haggerty, a husky blonde from Kensington, had an easy time with George Albright, knocking him down twice in the first round before the referee stopped the uneven encounter.

William Crawford, a Daggart favorite, knocked out Carl (Toots) Schmidt of Nativty in the second round of a sensational battle. Schmidt, a clever boy, was sailing along giving Crawford a pasting until a wild swing to the jaw floored Carl. Schmidt made the mistake of getting up without a count and proved a sucker for Crawford's haymaker a second later.

Harry Devlin, a fast stepping boxer from the Daggart Club, defeated Charlie Keenan, of Nativty, in the 135-lb class; while Walter Rhoades repeated his victory over James Lefferts when he got the judges' decision. Harry Siza, Daggart A. C., won by a technical knockout over John De Angelo, of the North East Shrine Club, in the third round.

Dominic Michini, a Germantown Boys' Club entry, surprised the crowd by staging a comeback in the second and third rounds to win over Charles Shea, of Daggart, in the 140-lb class. Shea had Michini out on his face when the bell saved him in the first round, but Michini came out in the second and stung Shea repeatedly with a looping left to the face. Shea had no defense for this blow, enabling Michini to score the winning points.

In a return bout between John Acker and Thomas Francis, Francis won again by virtue of a beautiful left jab that stabbed Acker all over the place, even putting him on the floor. So effective was the blow, Acker, a heavy puncher, was unable to land an effective wallop on the shifty Francis during the three rounds.

Announcement was made that an all-star show will be held Wednesday with several top-notch scrappers appearing.

RIDING CLUB SHOW TO BE HELD JUNE 6 AND 7

NEW HOPE, Apr. 23.—Dating of shows for the season in this vicinity, together with the adopting of a constitution and planning for election of officers featured the meeting of the Delaware Valley Horse Show Association. The session was held at the headquarters of the New Hope Riding Club. James Harley Nash, of New Hope and New York City, president of the organization, presided.

In attendance were representatives of the 112th Field Artillery, the Bristol Riding Club, the Yardley Riding and Driving Club, and the stables of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Kellogg, of Princeton.

The organization sanctioned a show for the Yardley Riding and Driving Club, May 17. Jack Spencer, managing director of the club, said today that he has the promise of a large number of entries for the exhibit. The show given by this organization last season was regarded as one of the best staged in this section. Mr. Spencer believes the coming event will have as many or more entries in the various classes.

The Bristol Riding Club will have its show June 6 and 7. Announcement will be made of the dates for the shows at New Hope and Princeton.

Officers of the association will be elected at the next meeting. This date will also be announced.

GALIONE TO APPEAR ON ST. ANN'S CARD

"Jimmy" Galione, who won his initial bout via the knock-out route, will again appear on the St. Ann's boxing card scheduled for Monday night in the Italian Mutual Aid arena. Galione's opponent will be Marcus Polsky, hard-hitting south-paw fighter from the Seymour club.

Galione had an easy time with his opponent in his first start, Joseph Padlo, Seymour, who put up little or no defense because he knew he was outclassed from the start. The St. Ann's glove floorer Padlo twice in this bout. Polsky will be after revenge as he belongs to the same stable as Padlo. The fight has already been sanctioned by the Middle Atlantic A. A. U.

Another bout which is expected to have the fans on the edge of their seats is that in which Lenny Dever, that never-say-die Irish youth, meets Salvatore Manzo, of the Mason Club. Manzo beat Dever in their last meeting but the Bristolian pulled the biggest rally ever seen here when he came back in the last session to batter Manzo all over the ring after being floored three times in the second round.

Several other bouts are hanging fire. Matchmaker Moffo is trying to get two recent champions of the A. A. U. here. One is John Giordano, Seymour, junior A. A. U. champion, who he is trying to match with Bristol's knock-out king, Vince Della, and the other is Frank Donofrio, present senior A. A. U. champion. It is most likely that Harry Davis, the British colored sensation, will be booked with Donofrio if Moffo succeeds in his

Argue Canal Question Before Supreme Court

The 40-mile stretch of canal in question lies between Raubsville and Yardley. The property was converted into Roosevelt Park, named for the late President Theodore Roosevelt, after it was taken over by the Department of Forests and Waters under an act passed by the Legislature in 1931.

The state department is seeking to withdraw its maintenance of the property along the old canal and toss it back on the canal company. Although technically a defendant in the action, the canal company is not opposing the taxpayers' application for the restraining order against the state officials.

The state's highest tribunal, which took original jurisdiction in the case, has permitted Joseph Sharfstein, city solicitor of Philadelphia, to intervene in the suit on behalf of Philadelphia. Sharfstein contends the future water supply of Philadelphia is seriously involved in the dispute.

Constitutionality of the act of 1931 was the point of importance in the argument before the Supreme Court yesterday afternoon. Former Attorney General William A. Schnader, on behalf of the plaintiffs, sought to maintain the act was in no way in violation of the constitution.

Schnader told the court the act's provision that permitted the canal companies to continue and to have the right to dispose of all water in the canal was fair and proper. He asserted the state officials have abandoned the property and sought to return it to the canal company notwithstanding the Legislature's previous direction that it should become state property.

On behalf of state officials, Deputy Attorney General Grover C. Ladner argued the agreement, following the act of June 1931, between the canal company and the Commonwealth through which the 40-mile stretch of canal was turned over to the state, did not comply with the provisions of the act and accordingly is void.

Ladner sought to maintain the Legislature intended to have the canal company convey and the Commonwealth accept all the rights and title and interest of the canal while the deed of transfer reserved for the company the privilege of maintaining water mains and pipes under the towing path and constructing and maintaining under the canal bed water supply pipes and other appliances necessary for the taking of water from the canal by any successor of the canal company.

Under the deed of conveyance, Ladner argued the Commonwealth's right has been given away without authority and in such a manner as would permit the use of the part of the canal property reserved by the company to bring a water supply from the Lehigh river to the city of Philadelphia.

City Solicitor Sharfstein contended the right of Philadelphia to use the waters of the Delaware cannot be interfered with by the Delaware Division Canal Company because the act of 1931, which gave the canal company the right to use or sell water from the Delaware, is unconstitutional.

William Jay Turner, counsel for the canal company, stated the company is submitting itself to the court's final decision in the matter, but added the company is not and never has been taking any water from the Delaware river because the river lies below the level of the canal bed and could not be obtained unless a huge dam was built. Turner added that the company has no intention of building such a dam.
